Installed in 1975, the Vaillancourt Fountain is officially titled, "Québec Libre!". The night before the sculpture's inauguration, artist Armand Vaillancourt inscribed "Québec libre!" in red letters on the sculpture. The next day when he noticed that the note had been erased, Vaillancourt jumped on the statue to re-inscribe his message.

married at the Beaux Arts-style building.

With 23 miles of ladders and 300,000 rivets in each tower, the Golden Gate Bridge was the world's longest span when it opened in 1937.

An artificial island, Treasure Island was created for the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition, and is named after the novel by Robert Louis Stevenson, a one-time San Francisco resident.

The 6 Victorian homes across from Alamo Square Park are among the few Victorians to survive the Great Fire.

Grace Cathedral Episcopal Church is the West Coast's largest Episcopalian cathedral.

Every hour and half-hour, the clock bell atop the Ferry Building chimes portions of the Westminster Quarters. Punch 21 Productions

The Tower was funded by a gift bequeathed by Lillie Hitchcock Coit, a socialite who reportedly liked to chase fires. Though the tower resembles a firehose nozzle, it was not designed this way. Punch 21 Productions

The dome of SF's City Hall is almost a foot taller than that of the US Capitol Building. In 1954, Joe DiMaggio and Marilyn Monroe married at the Beaux Arts-style building. Punch 21 Productions

Lombard Street is not actually the most crooked in SF. That honor goes to Potrero Hill's Vermont Street between 22nd and 23rd. Punch 21 Productions

First established in the mid-19th Century, SF's Chinatown is the oldest and largest Chinatown in the US. Punch 21 Productions

Located at one end of Fisherman's Wharf, Aquatic Park was built as part of FDR's Works Progress Administration Project. Punch 21 Productions

San Francisco de Assis. It is the oldest building in San Francisco, built in 1791, and has survived two major earthquakes.

The dome of SF's City Hall is almost a foot taller than that of the US Capitol Building. In 1954, Joe DiMaggio and Marilyn Monroe married at the Beaux Arts-style building.

Interscope Communications

From 1910-1920 the Castro was called "Little Scandinavia" because of its high concentration of residents of Scandinavian ancestry.

An artificial island, Treasure Island was created for the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition, and is named after the novel by Robert Louis Stevenson, a one-time San Francisco resident.

Regency Enterprises

The 2nd highest point in SF after Mt. Davidson, Twin Peaks sit at the geographic center of SF. The native Ohlone people called the area "Los Pechos de la Chola" or "Breasts of the Indian Maiden," but in the 19th Century when America took over the area, it was renamed "Twin Peaks".

California Palace of the Legion of Honor was completed in 1924, and on Armistice Day of that year the doors opened to the public. In keeping with the wishes of the donors, to “honor the dead while serving the living,” it was accepted by the city of San Francisco as a museum of fine arts dedicated to the memory of the 3,600 California men who had lost their lives on the battlefields of France during World War I.
